Elizabeth Foulke

Elizabeth Foulke is a passionate writer, educator, and a contributing editor to the Ocean State Review. Her essays and poetry have appeared in Third Coast, Slag Glass City, About Place, Little Patuxent Review, Solstice, Grub Street Literary Magazine, and others. She has a long-standing interest in the intersection of gender, race, and singleness.

Joe Bueter

Joe Bueter lives and writes in central Pennsylvania. His poetry has appeared in The Southern Humanities Review, Vassar Review, Confrontation, Nashville Review, Cumberland River Review, as well as other journals. He has also participated in the Joaquin Miller Cabin Poetry Series in Rock Creek Park, Washington, DC, and he has been a resident at the Virginia Center for the Creative Arts.

Building stronger communities takes creativity.
